

ENVIRONMENTAL AWARENESS POLICY

Adventure Lifesigns expeditions have a great respect for the environment. We work closely with local groups and organisations to generate awareness of the importance of protecting the wilderness environment. Whilst undertaking any expedition we endeavour to observe our environmental philosophy to respect and protect the natural environment.

Adventure Lifesigns expeditions endeavors to promote awareness of the fragility of the local environment, indigenous vegetation and wildlife, and ways to assist in their protection. We offer environmental projects via the John Muir Awards for participants to work on and learn about the fragility of the environment and the threats that indigenous vegetation and wildlife must battle with for survival. Please contact our office for further details.

Protecting the environment in the countries we visit during our expeditions is of major importance to us. We endeavour to minimise the impact each expedition has, both environmentally and culturally through our commitment to conservation, education and support. We use local transport and accommodation where possible and encourage the participants to buy local produce at all opportunities. We are mindful of waste disposal, and comply with Friends of Conservation travel guidelines, and respect local cultures and traditions. Please contact our office for further details.

We sent the majority of our paperwork via email. It's good for the environment and keeps our costs down. Please think before you print any of our paperwork.
